Captured Patricia Ann Crawford

Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw has just purchased a new RV to celebrate the huge contract that there newly opened plumbing company just received. They decide to take their entire family to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, to go air boating in the everglades. After a few misunderstanding between the children they get on the highway and head out on their journey from Indianapolis, Indiana. Once on the road Debbie's two daughters describe a nightmare they had about their mother that turns into a premonition. Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw stop at a rest area to freshen up and it turns into mayhem. Mrs. Bradshaw is abducted and taken to the hills of Virginia. She is held captured by a mad man for several years. She finds out that there are other black females that have been taken there as well. The tiny town turns out to be filled with black women from all across the United States. Meanwhile, back in Indiana Mr. Bradshaw has a horror story of his own, while trying to conceal his new family from his step children he turns into a monster worse than the one that has captured his wife.
